Description:	I've registered the 'chiliproject.fr' domain and would like to provide French speaking people with an official French ChiliProject website and demo. I'd provide translated documentation, interfaces and would keep french forums active with your help.  Comments, ideas, suggestions?

Are you wanting to setup a completely separate website just for the french bits, or wanting to have all the docs of cp.o translated here, in it's own section/heading?

I had the idea of having a completely separate website that would try to stick as much as possible to the translated content of this one as far as documentation, wiki and other information go.

15:25:15 Khalsa: deurk: I think, it may be better than to setup a completely new/seperate site

15:25:27 Khalsa: we put our heads together and come up with a more generic solution

15:25:36 Khalsa: that we can use for other languages besides and includin french

15:25:55 Khalsa: I have people wanting to translate all docs to german and japanese as well

15:27:13 meineerde: Khalsa: irc the wiki model theoretically support more than one WikiContent object for a WikiPage. That model could be extended for generic multi-language support in the wiki.

15:27:28 Khalsa: meineerde: yeah I was looking at that code just now

15:27:40 Khalsa: to see how hard would it be to extend it

15:27:53 Khalsa: I wonder if this isn't a good place for a core plugin ;)

15:28:25 meineerde: Khalsa: I would try to pluginize the whole wiki module.

15:29:00 Khalsa: dependencies: entirely new fully-fleshed out and featureful internal API :(

15:29:05 Khalsa: which is a ways off

15:29:06 meineerde: Khalsa: it isn't that much code (and most of it is redundant once we have the generic journalizing, phlebas wrote)

Added #123 as blocker.

Once we get that let's see if we can't convince Holger to do this for us :)
