What do you think about giving each user a wiki textarea (like the one to update an issue)? Then they can put links or notes or whatever they want in there (even run wiki macros....)

This would need per-user customization of My Page Blocks though (larger feature)

Yes. I totally agree. Do it yourself wiki block would be much better. So for example in future admin will have an ability to add some default blocks for new users, like wiki block with some basic instructions, and another wiki block with some other data, e.g. emergency contacts and so on.

And I really think we need to think about modernization of My Page, to allow plugins add their page blocks too. That will be awesome, I think.

+1 This would be really cool. You can't set a default login screen or query in chili which is a bummer, this feature would help a little. My page desperately needs more help as many users rely on cross-project/dashboard views.
