Other than overriding @ProjectsHelper#project_settings_tabs@ to add your tab, no. I think that would be a candidate for a MenuManager type menu.

Should I also override ProjectsController.settings method to get some data for my partial view?

Can I add a field to Project model from my plugin? Is there some way to add one to one relationship between my plugin's model and a specific project?

Could be a duplicate of <http://www.redmine.org/issues/3686>

Or at least add any data you need by wrapping it.

Yes and yes, but those are "plugin/rails dev 101"s. I think the plugin tutorial and advanced tutorial on redmine.org cover parts of that, if you have specific questions ask in the forum :-)

I needed this ASAP so I worked up a patch to do this. It can be found at

<https://github.com/ryanbriones/chiliproject/tree/project-settings-menu-manager>

I don't know if it's in the proper ChiliProject standards, but I'd be happy to rework it as necessary.

Looks OK from a first quick look, mind making a github pull request for that?

Oh, then I've overlooked it, sorry :-). Just make sure to post the link to the pull request to the corresponding issue, thanks.

Ryan:

Thanks for the pull request. I have two comments I added to it, can you take a look and let me know what you think?

I also opened #382 so we can do something similar to the Admin > Settings page.

Could we have this on the next minor release?

Meanwhile one can use the plugin: <http://projects.andriylesyuk.com/projects/redmine-settings>
