ChiliProject - Bug # 300: confusing document overview

Status:	Open	Priority:	Normal
Author:	Bastian Kruck	Category:	User interface
Created:	2011-03-21	Assignee:
Updated:	2012-08-15	Due date:

Remote issue URL:
Affected version:
Description:	When visiting the document overview of a project, the short preview of a documents content is normally formatted (including headings). This leads to a confusing view, where the difference between documents breaks down and the user who just wants to select a document doesn't now, where to click.
	Why don't just add a characteristic css class to this view and format headings without the horizontal line?

History

2011-03-21 11:12 pm - Eric Davis

- Category changed from Text formatting to User interface

Some more comments at https://github.com/chiliproject/chiliproject/pull/26

2012-07-22 10:42 pm - TomÃ¡Å¡ Jukin

We have a new theme but the issue is still here. The document listing (every one, the one in Dashboard and the one in project) is confusing. It is very hard to find out where one document preview begins and ends.

We should use some CSS, or show just names of documents, what do you thing?

This should not be a huge task, should it?

2012-08-15 12:20 pm - TomÃ¡Å¡ Jukin

Any update to this?

Files

redmine_theme_critique.PNG	128.1 kB	2011-03-21	Bastian Kruck