Description:	From Felix on #123
	&gt; [B] One change I've noticed: the event types (used to display the icons on the activity list) are now object- and not event/journal-bound (a closed issue will return the issue-closed type for all its events, including past ones in which the issue was still open) and some are missing (issue-note/"a new issue note without issue edit" and issue-edit/"an issue edit" at least).

<https://github.com/finnlabs/chiliproject/commit/6131df3935cae773c9495c39519f7f5edec6683e> fixes this, it has 2 parts:

* the change in `@acts_as_journalized.rb@` restores the `@event_type@` to the journalized model, not the journal model associated to it (as `aaj` calls `@acts_as_event@`, the later would recognize the `@ModelJournal@` model as being the event, not the `@Model@` itself, hence the explicit default in `aaj`),

* the change in `@app/models/issue.rb@` restores the previous behavior of:

** on issue note without editing the issue metadata, the event type is `@issue-note@`,

** on issue edit without a change to a closed status, the event type is `@issue-edit@`,

** on issue edit with a change to a closed status, the event type is `@issue-closed@`,

** else the event type is `@issue@`.

(please note that this is not exactly the previous behavior, as the previous behavior was the event type set to `@issue@` for all issue events (i.e. non note or metadata edit event, meaning the creation event) when the issue is still open an `@issue-closed@` on all issue events when the issue is closed)

I think this is a better behavior. The activity page was difficult to use in order to see what types of changes happened. By separating them out into more options, hopefully it will be clearer.

I'll see if I can review it today.
