Description:	From Felix
> I've also removed the "visible" scope on journals added in commit:27177def because I haven't found it to be used anywhere, should probably be re-added for compatibility's sake.

I'm not sure what the best approach for this is. We can't check the view_issues permission because Journals are no longer only issues (WikiContentJournal). We could add a null named scope that returns nothing on Journal and then on each subclass we can add the proper permissions. But this won't help compatibility at all.

I'm thinking we just skip this and break compatibility. The visible scope is pretty new anyways.

I haven't seen it used anywhere, so I'd say drop it.
