Description: It is currently not possible to display the current time spent for an issue in a column of the issue listing. This feature would be useful since it would allow comparing of time spent and estimated time by displaying both column side by side.

Eric Davis had suggested the following modification on stackoverflow:

<http://stackoverflow.com/questions/321403/redmine-add-spent-time-field-to-issues-display>. Maybe this could get integrated into a new release?

Very similar to #459 and my comment there applies too. The difference between the filters and columns is very small.

(I'm happy leaving both feature requests open, since they really are different things)

There's a pull request adapting the Redmine patch in #838, alas it's missing the tests. If someone ports those too we could include it.
